Maa Baglamukhi — The Goddess

Maa Baglamukhi is one of the ten Mahavidyas — the cosmic goddesses of Tantra. She is known as "Shatru Stambhini" — the one who paralyses enemies and stops all negativity. Her complexion is golden yellow (Pitambara), she holds a club in her right hand, and with her left she pulls the tongue of the demon Madan — symbolising the power to silence falsehood and evil.

Nalkheda Dham is one of the three principal Siddha Peethas of Maa Baglamukhi in India, alongside Datia (MP) and Kangra (Himachal Pradesh). The idol here is Swayambhu — self-manifested, not carved by human hands. Lakhs of pilgrims visit every year for Hawan, Puja Anushtan, and blessings for court cases, health, and prosperity.

Deity	Maa Baglamukhi (Pitambara Devi)	Location	Nalkheda, Agar Malwa, MP — 465445

The temple faces east, welcoming the first light of dawn directly onto the deity. Devotees traditionally offer yellow flowers, turmeric (haldi), and besan laddoo. The presiding deity wears Pitambara — golden yellow robes — and the entire temple atmosphere is suffused with yellow as Maa's sacred colour.
